in recent years, it has been identified that emotional status and mood play a significant role in the alteration of sleep patterns in patients with cancer (Stepanski, et al)